King Views United States Troops

One of the war correspondents of an American newspaper, who happened to be present when the first troops of the United States passed through London, thus describes his feelings when seeing King George salute "Old Glory":

"I was anxious, however, to see our troops march past the King, so I hurried up the Mall in time to see His Majesty make his appearance, with all that ceremony which is always dear to the democratic heart. As I saw him standing there waiting for the troops to come, it occurred to me that here was just one more historic moment that was crowded into a succession of dramatic incidents that make one of the most significant chapters of the war."

Here you saw the head of the mightiest Empires of the world waiting for a host of soldiers, who wrap themselves the symbol and the outposts of democracy. As I stood there, watching his kindly face and realizing that in him are represented all the kingly glories of England, I felt that another great milestone had been set up in the journey of the war. He was there as the emblem of a memory which is as free and frank as our own."

All U.S. Should Have Been There. I noted the keenness with which he watched our troops; the rigidity with which he stood at the salute; the sense of fine spirit and the whole royal party displayed. And in a small way I felt some of the feeling that had stirred the hearts of those young men who marched by, recruited as they were from farm and factory, representing many races and bloods, but, best of all, the proud old English strain which is mother of them all.

I have one regret, and it is that the whole of our people could not see what I saw. It would have filled them with pride; it would have stirred them with hope; it would have thrilled them with a sense of the Great Cause to which they have now dedicated their lives. To have behind the spectacle of those splendid men marching through London's lanes of cheering humanity was to feel freedom is secure and that the world will make one of the most significant chapters in the end they would succeed."

"What I am concerned about most," the Premier went on, "is not the effect which the failure of Russia would have upon the war, but the harmful effect it would have on the cause of democracy in the world."

The European War.

Oh hark! what is that distant sound like booming in the ear? It sounds like there's a clash of arms in some-where land I hear; I hear the roar of cannon, and I see the flash of lance, It is in the German armies, now marching on to France.

Oh hark! I hear the bugle that calls them far away, I hear the bugle sounding, no longer can we stay. There's orders out from Britain; Canadians to advance, To fight those German millions upon the soil of France. They left their wives in sorrow, their children's tears did flow, When they received the orders, Canadians had to go. They then stood up together in a moment to advance, To cross the briny ocean and disembark in France.

They soon arrived in Britain, there for to take a rest, No doubt the thought was written in many a lonesome breast; That when they left their country, they saw it at a glance, That they would soon be on the field to spill their blood in France. They had no time for leisure, their work was soon to know: They had to drill for pleasure to fight that tyrant foe. Their stay was short in Britain, soon heard the word advance; Was put on board a transport and landed safe in France.

They there received a welcome from many a man and maid, To see the pride of Canada who came to give them aid. They soon got in the trenches and fought with spear and lance, And many a gallant soldier has fallen to sleep in France. It was the third of August the German hordes did come, They soon invaded Belgium that land to over-run. They trampled on their honour in their lust for to advance, And stepped on quite Belgium to crush their foes in France.

They'd no respect for women, indecency began, They suffered not the feeble to do the best they can. They had no heart for pity, you could see it at a glance, For when they crossed the border they did the same in France. The tents ran up, and with them the truth, the time to know, That their son and brother had fallen by the foe, They ne'er shall them coming, or ever see a glance Of those who fell in battle, their bones to rest in France.

The Germans fought like demons to crush their gallant foe, They murdered men and women their lust to overflow, They trud on human nature in their hurry to advance, And crushed down little Belgium to strike a blow at France. The women feel their sorrow, their hearts now aches with fear, The men can't sleep, they wake up with a start and with tears, You hear the cry of women who yet may have a chance. To plead their case of dependency in the solemn courts of France.

God grant the ships be speeded with an unseas, hand to hand, That brings them victory and joy in never cease; That they will be met by those who land of chance, For to embark for Canada from the blood-stained shores of France.

Some will return on crutches and others an empty sleeve, And should they come both dead and empty we shall no longer grieve. These lines may cause a worry, so, I will close the door, And ask them not to hurry, God grant an end to war.

—JOHN H. MYERS.

Allies Victory Depends on Navy

Premier Lloyd George, in a speech at Birkenhead, England, a few days ago, on receiving the freedom of the city, declared that the whole Allied cause and the freedom of the world depended on the supremacy at sea, and that he was certain it would be maintained.

German statesmen, he said, had been at great pains to impress upon their people that the submarine figures given out by him in the House of Commons recently were inaccurate. He declared these figures were absolutely correct, and that they put an end to all hopes of the enemy to win.

The Premier asserted that he was absolutely convinced that the German submarine never would be able to beat down the strength of the British Empire, or beat down the hopes of the alliance by means of all the efforts the Germans could make with the submarine.

He said that the news from Russia in the last few days had not been good. He thought when the revolution came that it would have the effect of postponing victory but he had expected an earlier recovery.

"However, through all we must exercise patience," he added.

Mr. Lloyd George said that the Russian leaders, all of whom were patriots, knew that the many attempts in the Black region involved the fate of the revolution, the fruits of which they would do their best to defend. Under fire the Russian leaders were repairing the machine which had broken down, and he was confident that in the end they would succeed.

"What I am concerned about most," the Premier went on, "is not the effect which the failure of Russia would have upon the war, but the harmful effect it would have on the cause of democracy in the world."

GERMAN INTRIGUE FAILS.

"One thing gives me satisfaction," he continued, "German attempts to sow discord between the Allies in the East and the Allies in the West had failed, and Germany only decided to invade Russia with the sword because all her other methods and machinations failed."

The Premier said he was repudiated with the calumny that England was responsible for the war. "England drew the sword in honor of her pledged word," he declared.

Far from being despondent about the crisis in the eastern theatre, Mr. Lloyd George said further, the people should look forward to Russia with hope, because she had recently won a greater part yet before the war was over in saving the world from Prussian domination.

"Dark as may be the clouds in the Russian sky," he said, "there is sunshine on the banners of the Allies in all other theatres of war. Germany may boast her victories in the East against resolute forces, but she has her reply in the success of the Allies in the West, especially in the recent success of the Italians.

"America, who has now come into the conflict, has never known defeat, and on this occasion, too, she, with her Allies, will triumph over her enemies."

"For all these reasons I ask you to climb the footpath. Our footpath may be stony paths to climb, but we will climb them. Our footpath may be stained with blood, but we will reach the heights, and then in front we will see the rich valleys and plains in the new world."

The Victor Of Galicia

Had Romantic Rise From Humble
Origins

Russia is ringing with the name of the latest hero of the war, Lieutenant Korniloff, of the Kavalka Cavalry of Galicia, whose astonishingfeat first proved that the new advance is no mere flash in the pan. General Korniloff is the most daring, chivalrous and dashing officer in the army. As a romantic figure from the old, old, Russian history has only one parallel—that of Michel Vassiliievich Lopukhov, fisherman's son, poet, philosopher and author of the modern Russian language in the first half of the eighteenth century.

From log cabin to general is the literal text of the chronicle of General Korniloff's rise. Born a few years ago, son of a need-stricken Karakalash Cossack in Western Siberia, who later raised a large family on a pitiful income, Korniloff, a village schoolboy, began to early begin rough forest work. At the age of 9 he received his first instruction. When he was 12, he, his own eyes and all-saints, joined the cadets to enter the Siberian Cadets corps, largely composed of sons of local magnates. Thanks again to his own efforts, this son of a poor Russian peasant character gained free training at the Michailovsk Artillery school, where his amazing mathematical facilities brought approval from the authorities, though he was suspected, with reason, of being a secret revolutionary.

Next General Korniloff was offered a place in the cavalry, but his parents, who were obliged to serve in Turkestan, in the Japanese war he received the rank of colonel, and was entrusted with a despatch mission of covering the retreat from Mukden of one of General Kropotkin's shattered armies. It was executed with such resolution and dash that he was awarded the George Cross. Later he travelled all through Turkestan, the Caucasus and Europe, studying, observing and writing invaluable books on Turkestan and the countries of Central Asia.

Amazing to strangers is his gift for language, for he speaks English, all English, but also Persian, Chinese and every dialect of Central Asia. At the outbreak of the great war he was in command of the Forty-eighth division, one of the best Savary's, under Korniloff, in Galicia. In 1914 he repeated the Mukden feat, covering under an unexpected and long-haul of 1,000 miles a German shell which had torn his own horse through the encircling foe, but he himself was wounded and taken prisoner by the Austrians.

The German press related that their generals were so impressed with General Korniloff's accomplishments and noble bearing that the return of his sword showed greater respect than to their own victorious commander. His restless spirit did not long stand captivity. After a daring escape from an Austrian prison he was a astonishing adventure, he reached Russia.

At the outbreak of the revolution he was invited to command the troops of the red, and, applying no discipline in revolutionary Russia. When the disorders arose General Korniloff, fearing the necessity of repression, resigned, saying he would not be a tool of his own countrymen. He took command of the Eighth Army, whose brilliant example is due primarily to him.

Want More Ships

Japan Might Be Willing to Help the Allies

Japan has a large mercantile fleet which, if only a small fraction could be spared, would be of great service in this crisis.

It is estimated that a ship of 10,000 tons could transport 2,000 men, with their equipment, ten ships of this class could transport an army division to Europe within a month.

Japan might be willing to contribute service to the Allies, and it would seem that Japan might well be able to contribute this number of ships of this class if it were not for the number that she possesses.

That the Japanese government might look favorably upon this proposal is suggested by developments in Tokio. This gives an inclination, and apparently inspired, that Japan might be willing to help out with ships. After quoting an interview with Baron Tadashi Daito, Minister of Communication, the despatch goes on to say:

"It is believed that Japan would be willing to place some of her merchant vessels at the disposal of the Entente for service in the Atlantic, as well as co-operate in supplying new ships to the extent of her capacity."

Peaces Bring Almost $5 Each

Sheep owners in the Magrath, Alberta, district have practically completed shearing and find that their average shears are cutting 100 pounds, that is, eight pounds in weight. More of the wool is being shipped East, but that which has been sold has netted about sixty cents a pound. This means that the fleeces are bringing the sheep-rackers practically five dollars apiece.

Co-Operating With American Fleet

Brazil Helping to Hunt German Sea
Raiders

Brazil's navy has been co-operating with the American fleet in South American waters in hunting down German sea raiders and watching for German submarines.

Sending of special diplomatic missions to Brazil to arrange for greater co-operation of forces and the closest possible co-operation of the two governments is under consideration.

Without formal declaration of war, Brazil thus practically has joined the United States against Germany. Whether Brazil will implement her declaration of war is not yet known, but it is regarded as doubtful because the government at Rio de Janeiro is inclined to regard its action rather as defensive than aggressive.

Brazil's seizure of the war-bound

German ships has added to her merchant marine more than 150,000 tons which with that already at her disposal gives Brazil considerable material to the solution of the problem of getting supplies to the Allies.

Brazil's navy is the largest of the South American group and can be expected to co-operate with the American fleet to the best advantage.

A plan for safeguarding ships carrying foodstuffs to Europe already has been put into effect.

Present Fuel Situation

Coal Should Be Secured Now
Last at New Winter

The following indicates that there will be a greater coal shortage next winter than last, and therefore we should arrange for our fuel supply accordingly:

Great Britain is short 15,000,000 tons of coal; France lacks even more; the coaling of Allied warships in the Atlantic coast, the naval, domestic and industrial coal supplies indicate to the entrance of the United States as a belligerent, all mean that the coal production must be increased.

United States officials anticipate that next fall there will be unprecedented demands on rolling stock as well as greater difficulty in handling the present load.

The situation is that the United States companies have placed an embargo on coal going out of that country, and the United States is trying to keep coal in the country for emergency that may arise.

The present rather acute shortage of coal in many quarters will not be helped by war conditions in the United States.

Coal prices have generally increased, and, unless there is government regulation, they will reach higher levels.

The U. S. Geological Survey as well as other agencies having knowledge of the facts, is urging all consumers of coal, both large and small, to reduce their consumption during the summer months.

In so far as central and western Canada are concerned, the situation is that the coal output of the coal fields in the west some 200,000 tons has already been lost from production this year; also owing to the shortage of ships and the great demand for coal for the manufacture of munitions, much less coal than ordinarily was brought up the Great Lakes last year, so that there are practically no supplies on hand.

From the above it is evident that, to be assured of our winter's supply of coal, and, at the same time, save money, we should buy coal in the interior, we should buy coal during the summer months wherever and whenever it is available.

The Canadian government has appointed a fuel controller to take charge of the situation, and the coal dealer and householder can assist by filling their bins now with sufficient coal to last through the winter.

By so doing they will help out conditions when the railway congestion occurs next fall.—W. J. D.

For Now Has Over 6,000,000 Troops

General Delacroix publishes in The Temps the results of his study, supposedly from authoritative sources, of the present number of German reserves. He estimates that the present German troops of all kinds and classes up to June 1 reached 130,000, and that that total was increased by losses of 70,000,000, and 130,000,000, resident in foreign countries.

General Delacroix estimates that of this force nearly 5,500,000 are employed as first line, rear line and inferior troops, leaving a movable balance of reserves of about 755,000.

Away at the end of the deck she was the man she wanted; he was standing with a composed attitude. He did not even an overcoat, nor did he seem to miss one.

She came up quietly towards him, catching on now and again to the brass rail for support, at the boat-holes to life again. She was led to go to the friendly rail and cross over to the sea-side to speak to him. As she came up he turned about and stood her with a hand on her arm.

At the first sight of him she had quailed. When he touched her she shook as a branch shaketh and strains in the wind.

"You wish to go below?" said politely. "Can I help you?"

The rich, somewhatлагging voice of her eyes with the yellowish whites, made her feel faint. She spoke almost in a whisper, holding on to the outer rail of the vessel.

"Sir," she said, "I am Miss Egerton's maid. I do not know why you have taken her away. I discovered it in time to overtake you. What are you going to do with her?"

The heat of this part of the deck to themselves. Every lurch and strain of the vessel sent a few more people scurrying below stairs.

He stepped forward, as though he would penetrate the disguise, of her thick veil, and she swooned with fear. She did not know what she expected—whether a shattering explanation of her or the dangerous timeliness she knew of old. He answered her quietly.

"Well, I might drop you overboard, but no one could be very much wiser. What did you do it for?"

"Because I love my young lady."

"I suppose you thought I were quite as good as he," she said.

"There was no time. I had barely time to catch the train. I heard at the tax rank that you had gone to Crossfield."

"You've done nothing since you come on board," he said.

"I swear I have not."

"If you have not up to this, I'll take care you don't get it. I'll shoot you the minute I have any indication that we're being followed. Then I'll shoot her and myself. We won't be much good to anybody by that time," he said to Silverdale.

"Yes, the Squire engaged me to be Miss Egerton's maid."

He swore quietly at the Squire; and there were terrible words, though the maid was gentle.

"Why the deuce don't you lift up that confounded veil?"

She shrank back from him.

"You might be surprised if I did."

"I am terribly disfigured."

"You poor devil! that is hard on you, being a woman. Women should always be presentable, and you're not good. I don't want you to lift your veil. Better keep it on always when I am about. I hate an ugly woman, though I've heard men say that when an ugly woman is lonely, she's loved better than anyone. What do you know about it, you poor devil?"

Again she trembled from head to foot, and gasped.

"I don't know what the Squire—him—gave you. I'll pay you better than him and buy your loyalty. I don't want you to be presentable when a woman near her—she's married. What's the matter with your voice? Can't you talk above a whisper?"

"It was an accident, sir."

"Come and sit down where I can see you."

He indicated a deck hair, and an olskin which seemed to have hardly vacated. She seated him with difficulty, and was glad to shrink within the olskin from the cold and the wet.

He moved about up and down the deck, keeping an eye on her all the time. She was numb with cold, but she sat patiently with the olskin drawn up about her face, a state of her eyes, and she withdrew her head into the olskin. Once he came and asked her if she was very cold. She answered that it did not matter. He offered her some bread from his flask, and she shook her head. He did not go away again on his tramp up and down the deck, but, standing over her, he spoke deliberately—

"You are just the least bit in the world like a woman I once knew," he said. "If I had told her she was as you are sitting, she'd have scratched my eyes out. I like fierce women so long as I can master them."

He went away smiling, but in a little while he was back again.

"You'd like to see the world?" he asked.

She nodded.

"You shall see the world if you are foolish. You need never go back to that dog's hole. I've plenty of money; and when that's gone I'll find more. You've the world before you, my good woman. You know that your bread is being sold. If it wasn't for this confounded rain, we'd have seen the French coast before now. I'm glad I'm done with England. It doesn't suit a man of my style."

Again he looked at her critically. "It is a pity you were born ugly," he said. "You have the suggestion of a handsome woman about you somehow. You carry your head well, though your hair is grey. Hera was chestnut. It hung down to her waist."

The rain and the fog lifted as they neared the French coast, and the heights of Boulogne, crowned by the great Basilica of Our Lady, came into view. Hera stood by the side of the boat, the steamer having been by this time a glimpse of a command of handwoven wares, about the girdle of wooden tables and chairs, and orange trees in tubs—the courtyard of a hotel.

The two hands had been letting in a good rain of upon them. They were outside an archway, through which there was a glimpse of a command of handwoven wares, about the girdle of wooden tables and chairs, and orange trees in tubs—the courtyard of a hotel.

"I am sorry it has been so miserly. It doesn't suit a man of my style as though the circumstances were the most ordinary in the world. Hera glowed on her as he spoke.

"You will be better for a meal. This is a good place to stop. There are many houses here, those places down on the quays, where they cook to please the English."

A cool villain, certainly. But cool as he was, he had his way, but he was perils. People had looked curiously at him and his companion as they went down the street after the train had left. He was very glad to get away from English people with their confounded meddlesomeness. He had snatched at the

of them, with a coolness which betrayed nothing at all of the anxiety he felt. There was no luggage to attend to. While other travellers had to get their trunks and bags into a cage. It had begun to rain again. The carriage had a leather hood, a couple of hoods, rather, which, being put up, left them snug in darkness, though through which the rain fell in a cold trickle.

The driver whipped up the horses, making a deal of noise over it. The rain dripped on their heads, and the carriage smelt of mouldy hay. They were going up a steep hill. It was impossible to hear any sound over the noise of the horses' whips, his objections to his horse, and the cracking of the whole crazy contrivance.

The carriage stopped. The two hands came out letting in a good rain of upon them. They were outside an archway, through which there was a glimpse of a command of handwoven wares, about the girdle of wooden tables and chairs, and orange trees in tubs—the courtyard of a hotel.

"I am sorry it has been so miserly. It doesn't suit a man of my style as though the circumstances were the most ordinary in the world. Hera glowed on her as he spoke.

He was very glad to get away from English people with their confounded meddlesomeness. He had snatched at the respectable-looking, veiled woman who alayed people's suspicions. He had an idea that without her he and Dolly would have attracted very disagreeable not to say dangerous company. There were other elements than this one in his easy acceptance of Dolly's maid as one of the party, but it was certainly much easier to do so when Dolly was the ostensible charge of Mrs. Birthett.

They went into the dark, low saloon, a manager, of which the occupants were obviously French. One had come to look at them, and with their table manners tucked away and their manner of eating, to be aware of that fact.

The warmth was grateful to the chilled travellers. Since the appearance of Mrs. Birthett, he had seen asseverated in the things that were befalling her, or perhaps those velvet brown eyes with the yellow whites, which kept her immune to the hysterical influence, so that she made no resistance.

Bank Clerks Footed

Berlin bank clerks have set an example in patriotic self-sacrifice. To aid in the movement of economy in leather, the clerks discarded their shoes. Scores of barefooted individuals were seen on the principal streets gingerly stepping along, and saving their cent feet as much as possible.

Berlin's shoe stores are now selling wonder sandals, the only leather being in toe and heel tips.

"I say exactly what I think," exclaimed the positive man.

"I congratulate you," replied Senator Smith, "but I never yet succeeded in wrangling a statement from you that would prevent some lawyer from taking it says things I never thought of."—Washington Star.

Women's True Mission

Sir J. Crichton Browne on Chickens Rearing

"Employment of women away from home," says Sir J. Crichton Browne, "is conducive to infant mortality and to debility of the surviving offspring in the first year of life."

"The best ordered creche is a wretched substitute for the maternal bosom," he told the annual meeting of the Hospital Saturday Fund at the Hotel Alexandra, Hamilton.

He said that when the war was over a number of women would continue doing men's work, but he hoped that a large majority of the married women would be satisfied with the new opportunities and find their true mission in suckling babies and in regulating and educating their young.

Human milk was priceless, but some notion might be formed of its economic value if we regarded it as it were cows' milk in its importance. In the year before the war 881,890 infants were born in England and Wales. The mothers of those infants should have yielded on an average one pint of milk a day for a lactation period of nine months which would amount to 29,945 gallons a day, worth, at 1s. od. a gallon 16,570 pounds a day, and 6,037,950 pounds a year.

Another Unsinkable Ship

An Italian naval engineer has designed a new type of unsinkable cargo boat which has been accepted by the Italian government of marine. The vessel has a displacement of 10,300 tons and can carry fifty-eight hundred tons of cargo. It has a deck which is 100 feet long, 20 feet wide, and the space between the inner and the outer walls being filled with coal and other materials which is intended to protect the ship from mine or torpedo.

Good Money In Wool

High Prices Received for Wool Encourages Alberta Farmers

Mr. R. C. Harvey, of Chin Coules, Alberta, has clipped 20,000 sheep this season, obtaining 140,000 pounds of wool. At a price of fifty cents a pound he will receive $7,000 for this clip, but it is expected that he will realize more than sixty cents a pound. The clipping was done by machine.

The Dominion government has graded a million pounds of Alberta wool to date this year which is 300,000 more than last year. Government experts are very pleased with the quality and quantity of Alberta's wool. Owners are preserving their sheep for wool production, and, except in favorable cases, are not selling them for meat. The high prices being realized for wool are encouraging farmers to increase their production and improve the quality. As many as a cent a pound has been obtained by some, and it is only to be hoped that by holding a little longer they will obtain more.

Alberta has forwarded 35 cars of 700,000 pounds of wool to the new government warehouse at Toronto. Some of this has already been disposed of to agents throughout the country at sixty cents a pound. It is to be hoped that the big sale at Toronto, as soon as all the wool from the West is received.

BABY'S GREAT DANGER DURING HOT WEATHER

More little ones die during the hot weather than at any other time of the year. Diarrhoea, dysentery, cholera, infantile spasms, and cholera come without warning, and when a medicine is not at hand to give promptly the short delay too frequently means that the child has suffered beyond aid. Baby Tablets should always be kept in homes where there are young children. An occasional dose of the Tablets will prevent cholera and diarrhoea, or if the trouble comes suddenly, the prompt use of the Tablets will cure the baby. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail in 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brooklyn, Ont.

Crown Prince Calls U-Boats "The Last Argument of Kings"

The "last argument of kings" is what the German crown prince calls submarines, according to a special cablegram received by the New York Times from The Hague. The crown prince's statement was:

Time Has Its Revenge

Justice Has Become the Slogan of the World Coalition

The fate of small nations forms a tragic chapter in the world's history, but it is not given to many peoples to stow so striking and eloquent a protest as did the small states of Alsace and Lorraine in the year of 1871. Gambetta was the author of the famous document, though it was men like he who resorted to strike. As men strike, Britain strikes back. The protest was followed by all the world, was the response of all the world, was the resignation and withdrawal of the twenty-seven deputies who represented Alsace and Lorraine. That was revenge. This very declaration, after an interval of forty-six years, France has once more solemnly ratified. In the words of her Prime Minister, the revenge which France seeks is not that of oppression, but that which consists in giving to all nations those ideals of justice, of liberty and of civilization which are the birthright of the French herself. The voice of Alsace-Lorraine calling for justice in 1871 is a voice crying in the wilderness. In 1917 justice has become the slogan of the world coalition—Christian Science Monitor.

Good-bye to Asthma. Persons suffering from asthma are extremely irritable known as the "asthmatic" when it is long with all their hearts for escape as from a tyrant. Never did they know when an attack may come and never know when it is to be aided is vain. With Dr. J. D. Walker's Asthma Remedy at hand, however, they can say good-bye to their enemy and enjoy life again. It helps at once.

"Born on the nation's confidence, with warmest wishes for its welfare, the German crown prince, like the nation, for their crews, men despising death, hated and feared by our foes, and ready ever for deeds of daring, may our submarines ever float the German flag victoriously through the seven seas and teach respect for them as the last argument of kings."

Allow American Decorations

King George has approved the granting of permission to officers and men of the British forces to wear on their uniforms decorations and awards given by the United States for war service.

Sixty-one per cent. of the first unit of the American Legion in the Canadian army, hold American decorations which should be worn in the Spanish war or in the Boxer uprising. Many of the men in the later units also have decorations.

The Canadian army, which has won decorations for bravery in the field in the present war, hereafter will receive also, as gifts from their commanding officers, the same decorations bearing the crest of George Washington upon the Canadian maple leaf.

YES! LIFT A CORN OFF WITHOUT PAIN!

Cincinnati man tells how to dry up a corn or callus so it will lift off with fingers.

You corn-pestered men and women need suffer no longer. Wear the shoes that nearly killed you before, says this Cincinnati authority, because a nail or a splinter in the shoe will not penetrate the skin, but will remain on a tender, aching corn or callus and stops soreness at once and soon the corn or hardened callus loosens so it can be lifted off, root and all without pain.

A small bottle of freeze-off costs very little at any drug store, but will positively take off every corn or callus you can find. This drug is tried and it is inexpensive and is said not to irritate the surrounding skin.

If your druggist hasn't any freeze-off tell him to get a small bottle for you from his wholesale drug house. It is fine stuff and acts like a charm every time.

Prefer Horses to Tractors

A staff correspondent of the Breeders' Gazette says that in Alberta there is a marked tendency to drop tractors and turn again to horses. A 200-horse power tractor in the hands of a section of Alberta's farmers is but one tractor at work, while teams of draymen were breaking on nearly every farm passed, says the writer. Nine teams of draymen at work on one farm and when put over the scales, not one of them grade. Percherons weighed less than 1,700 pounds, though they had been hard at work since early in April.

Five to eight horses per man are the rule, the correspondent goes on, and some are now driving twelve teams in stubble plowing, with three bottoms per gang.

The Canadian Miasma

The total amount of gold received by the Canadian treasury from the United States since the outbreak of the war has been $1,000,000,000, and the amount of gold received from all sources during the same period was nearly one billion and one-half million pounds sterling according to a writer in the Weekly Scotsman. The large amount of gold being sent to Canada was, of course, due to the exchange situation. The result of this is that the amount of gold has been to give Canada a mint with the largest capacity for refining raw gold in the world. The present capacity of the mint is 250,000,000 pounds sterling per week. Since September, 1915, there has been received at the mint forty-five million pounds sterling of raw gold, all of which has been refined there.

German Belittles

America's Air Power

Commander of Germany's Aerial Forces Speaks Slightly of America's Aid

The commanding general of the German aerial forces has in an interview in the German newspaper in which he attempts to discount the prospective participation of American aviators in the war for mastery of the air. Despite the fact that hundreds of States telling of hundreds of aviators who are to be graduated weekly and of the thousands of airplanes to be constructed, give the general an occasion to make a slight reference to the terms the usual Anglo-American bluff and American weakness for big talk and tall figures.

General von Seeckt says, undoubtedly will appear at no distant date in increasing numbers on the western front, but the American aviators thus far encountered have not been particularly dangerous, and in Germany, a new squadrons would merely augment the already numerical superiority of the Allies and not affect the question of aerial mastery which he asserts is dependent on the morale of the fliers and not their number.

"The German people," says the general, "will be compelled to learn these foolish, senseless stories which show all the characteristics of American tongue talk." He adds that America's present number of army and naval aviators is negligible, and that the British are far superior to the Germans in aerial warfare.

Sixty-one per cent. of the first unit of the American Legion in the Canadian army, hold American decorations which should be worn in the Spanish war or in the Boxer uprising. Many of the men in the later units also have decorations.

The American Legion in Canada, which has won decorations for bravery in the field in the present war, hereafter will receive also, as gifts from their commanding officers, the same decorations bearing the crest of George Washington upon the Canadian maple leaf.

Line Water Is One of the Best

The indications are that eggs will be dear next winter, dearer than they were last winter, as those who want eggs had better put some down now, while others do not, continue to pay for the blood, but got no permanent relief, till last winter when my mother got me to try MINARD'S LINE WATER. The effect of this was absolutely magical. Two bottles completely cured me and I have worked every working day since.

Announcement

We wish to inform young men who are desirous of joining the Army before Conscription is put into force, that the Army Medical Corps is still recruiting men for Overseas service, and the present may probably be the last opportunity they will have of joining this popular unit. Under conscription it seems likely that there will be no choice as to the branch of the army in which a man will serve, and we would urge eligible men to take advantage of this privilege before it is too late.

We realize that many young men who are desirous of joining the volunteer army, and who are under the impression that volunteer enlistment is already at an end, and we wish to correct any misapprehension there may be in this regard. By application to Recruiting Headquarters, A.M.C. Training Depot No. 13, Sarcee Camp, Alberta, full information can be obtained.
